State's counties face severe financial strains

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The potholes on Missouri's county roads are getting deeper. Collapsed county bridges aren't being repaired. And more and more counties are dipping in red ink to fund day-to-day operations.

Virtually all of the state's 114 counties are facing "severe financial strains," according to Tony Hiesberger, executive director of the state Association of Counties. Within two years, several counties may not be able to provide the services required by state law, he said.

But Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, a tax reform group supported by business, believes counties should undertake reforms before the state bails them out.

Besides rising costs, Hiesberger blamed the added services such as solid waste disposal program and indigent medical care that the state requires of counties "without providing the tools." County gas tax revenues dropped 9 per cent last year and property valuation has risen slower than costs, to deepen the plight.

The counties are seeking a raise in the property tax lid of 50 cents per $100 valuation. A higher tax levy to fund general revenues requires a two-thirds vote of the people. They are seeking state relief from some programs.

Controversy over how to run the counties appears to be growing locally. Last year, voters turned out 57 per cent of the county court officeholders.

The number of counties that are borrowing to fund daily operations has doubled in a year to 38, Hiesberger said. He called these counties "technically bankrupt" though they wouldn't be considered legally insolvent.

In addition, 53 counties are $2.4 million in debt to the state on indigent health care bills. The state has classified several of those counties "no pay."

Robert Knuth, research chief at the expenditure survey, said Missouri has too many counties. He said neighboring counties ought to combine several services.

"Within 30 miles of Springfield are four or five county seats all trying to maintain a jail," Knuth said. He said the counties should cooperate on the use of jails.

He said there were too many tax districts for water, fire protection and other services within counties. About 20 counties still have 123 townships, each of which has the power to levy taxes.

Knuth said counties should be given broader powers to provide services now handled by "fragmented" districts.

If the legislature gives the counties an easy way out by only raising the tax lid, he said, "We'll wait another generation to get reforms in county government."

Knuth contended that counties weren't in such difficult financial straits. Traditionally, counties have gone in debt to pay for services because revenues are collected late in the year.

But Hiesberger said it wasn't "wholesome practice" for counties to pay interest on debts just to operate. He said the counties keep borrowing earlier in the year until the trend has become "frightening."

Disaster assistance requested

CHARLESTON — A request for federal disaster assistance was made Thursday to the Disaster Planning and Operations Office in Jefferson City by the Mississippi County Court to relieve conditions caused by flooding and excessive rainfall.

Presiding Judge Ralph Adkisson said the court is requesting $52,594.32 through the office, which administers federal disaster programs relating to damages to public facilities.

Some 65 per cent of the requested amount has already been spent by the county from its road and bridge fund for road and bridge repairs, cleaning debris from roads and ditches, repairs to blacktop roads and cleaning of silt from road ditches caused by flooding and excessive rainfall this spring.

Letters were mailed to James H. Bash, coordinator of the Disaster Planning and Operations Office program; Gov. Christopher Bond, State Sen. Nelson Tinnon and Ste Reps. Fred DeField and Fred E. Copeland.

The court is also seeking assistance for agricultural proposes and damages caused by the flooding and excessive rainfall.

Resolution calls for convention

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Legislative sponsors of the resolution calling for a federal constitutional convention for an anti-abortion amendment say passage of the measure will serve as a stimulus for similar action in other states.

The House overwhelmingly approved the proposal Thursday, 11-36, making Missouri the first state in the nation to take such action in the wake of the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court ruling outlawing anti-abortion laws throughout the country.

Similar resolutions must be passed by 33 other states before Congress would have to call a constitutional convention. While supporters of the measure say they don't expect that to happen, they do hope that enough states will follow suit so that Congress will be forced to take some action on its own.

"If we can get four or five or six states to do the same thing this year, maybe somebody in Congress will get the message," commented Rep. William O'Toole, D-St. Louis, after the favorable House vote that sent the resolution to the nation's capitol.

Sen. Lawrence Lee, D-St. Louis, who introduced the proposal in the Senate and gained its swift approval, estimated that it will probably take another year before enough pressure comes from the states to force Congress to pass a proposed constitutional amendment and submit it for ratificatiion to the states as it has done with the Equal Rights Amendment.

To obtain approval Thursday, the House had to reverse its action of three days earlier when it adopted an amendment to the resolution that would have forced it to be sent back to the Senate.

That amendment called for the addition of language to the suggested constitutional amendment to permit abortions in cases of rape and incest. Supporters of that change argued in support of the provision through most of the two hours of emotional debate on the measure.

But it was finally rejected after opponents said language in the resolution would not be binding should a convention of the states be called to consider a "pro life" amendment.

The resolution guarantees the "right to life" for all persons including "unborn offspring at every state of their biological development." Abortion would only be allowed to save the life of the mother.

In the Senate, first round approval was given to a bill regulating rock festivals which emanated out of an investigation of last summer's Sedalia Rock Festival on the state fairgrounds.

Sen. Richard Webster, the Carthage Republican who headed the Senate probe and sponsored the bill, said the need for controlling such events is shown by the 800 persons treated for drug overdoses at the Sedalia festival.

The bill defines rock festivals as an event likely to attract 5,000 or more persons in a period exceeding 12 hours. Such events would be required to be licensed by the local county for $500 a day, plus 25 cents per person each day.

Religious and charitable music events are exempted from the measure, which still faces final Senate passage before going to the House.

Hand signals used

Although the North Vietnamese forbade it, American prisoners of war found ways of communicating with one another. Charlie Plumb, a former POW, shows the hand signal for the letter A. Hand signals were one method by which the POWs communicated, Plumb told the 300 people he addressed at the annual Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year banquet Thursday night.

Former POW cites keys to survival

Faith in God, commitment to country and pride in self were the three keys to surviving North Vietnam's prison camps, Charlie Plumb, a former prisoner of war, told 300 people attending the Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year banquet Thursday night.

Plumb spent nearly six years in a POW camp after his F4B Phantom jet was hit by a missile over North Vietnam in 1967. Plumb was on his 75th mission, only five days from ending his tour of duty, when he became a prisoner.

As he parachuted down, he realized he would have to make adjustments to allow for the humiliation the Communists would try to inflict on him. But his biggest fear, he said, was that the North Vietnamese would try to wreck his mind with brainwashing.

They tried, he said, but never succeeded. They were used to feeding propaganda to their own people, who have the mentality of children. The propaganda was too rude and unsophisticated to have much affect on the Americans, he said.

Communication between prisoners was often banned by the Communists, especially before 1970, but that didn't stop the Americans from setting up a clandestine communications system, Plumb said.

The POWs communicated by Morse Code transmitted by tapping a rock on a wall, hand signals, messages written on toilet paper wrapped around a rock and thrown across camp (called air mail), and perhaps the most original of all methods, vocal sounds consisting of coughing, sneezing, spitting and so forth, with each sound having a different meaning.

This method of talking was developed because the North Vietnamese were always making such sounds and didn't pay any attention when the POWs made such noises.

The biggest problem facing the POWs was boredom, Plumb said. Boredom was fought by self-discipline and by mental exercise designed to keep the POWs occupied.

Even the meals were boring, Plumb said. They were generally some kind of vegetarian soup, such as turnip, spinach or the one Plumb liked least, pumpkin soup.

Plumb said he once counted 100 consecutive meals alike -- all pumpkin soup.

He offered the recipe to the women in the audience. Just take a smashed pumpkin put it in boiling water and you have pumpkin soup, he said. Once a month you can add salt, he suggested.

Every night the POWs would have a movie, where one man, called the projector, would tell everything he could remember about a particular movie.

Plumb said at first the men could not remember every scene of the movies they had seen. But by the time they had been in prison for several years, they remembered every scene and practically every sentence. They may have remembered too well, Plumb said, because the ratings went from PG to X.

The prisoners often wondered what the first indication of their release would be, whether the jailer would simply open the door and tell them to leave, or if the marines would break down the doors.

The first indication was when the North Vietnamese brought the prisoners a new pair of pants. The pants had pockets and zippers, the first Plumb had seen in six years.

Plumb said treatment of the prisoners improved dramatically in 1970 when public pressure began to mount, demanding fair treatment of the prisoners.

His six years in a POW camp gave him a chance to define America. America, he said, is a close personal friend. It's the kid throwing papers in the morning and the little girl hugging her father when he comes home.

The faith, commitment and pride used by the POWs to survive can be used by people in America who face problems. People here share problems with the prisoners, such as boredom, humiliation, personal crisis, and also alcohol and drug problems.

"You don't have to be behind metal bars, mental bars will do," Plumb said.

In response to a question following the speech, Plumb called the present situation in South Vietnam a "bitter pill to swallow." But he said, we've apparently done everything we could have done for them.

WHAT THE PRESIDENT DID NOT SAY

The gloom and despair over the state of the world which reportedly now prevails among some senior U.S. officials unfortunately seems to us to be well merited. We found little in President Ford's recent foreign policy address that was hopeful or reassuring, and much that increases our apprehension that the overall leadership of our nation is not equal to the tasks before it.

It boggles the mind, for example, that the President of the United States should find it necessary to ask the Congress of the United States for money he knows he will not get in order to preserve the image of a United States, the image that the U.S. does not welch on its commitments to friends and allies. Can the spectacle of the inevitable refusal by the Legislative body do anything to bolster the credibility of any pledges, past or future, which may be made by the Executive branch? This is made doubly true by the cynicism of the background explanations of Mr. Ford's request for $722 million in military aid to the South Vietnamese: the President believes, but cannot say publicly, that the military situation in South Vietnam is hopeless. He is injecting some false hope into Saigon in order to postpone a panic long enough to get Americans and some Vietnamese out of Vietnam in an orderly evaccuation. As it was in Cambodia, plans for such an evacuation will be denied up until the last minute. The totality of our betrayal, in short, must be masked as long as possible. What kind of credibility will this whole sorry charade leave to U.S. promises — anywhere?

There is an air of frantic makeshift in all this — of total unreality. Particularly so, because the President persisted in his speech in the perpetration of the greatest unreality of all — that detente with the Communists is a viable policy for U.S. survival. The President never once suggested that its basic premises are as rotten as some defense lines around Saigon may prove to be, thanks to our failure to provide promised arms. Mr. Ford complained bitterly about Hanoi's "flagrant" and "systematic" violation of the 1973 Paris Accords on Vietnam. Never did he suggest that it is one of the ground rules of detente, as defined by both Moscow and Peking, that these violations should occur whenever the violator thinks he can get away with it. Instead, President Ford droned on for almost an hour, putting many to sleep with a banal repetition of platitudes, never once confronting the country with the real magnitude of the calamities that now threaten it.

As we are now discovering, our strategy in Vietnam was a no-win, sure-lose proposition. It badly misjudged the nature of the enemy. So does the policy of detente on the world chess board. Congress and the President are equally to blame, for both display the fundamental delusion.

But in the last analysis it is the people who decide. In ancient Carthage it was the people who finally decided that an end be put to unreality symbolized by the futile policy of appeasement of Rome. For them, the revelation came too late; Cato's call for Carthage's destruction went too long unheeded. Brezhnev's call for our demise is n o less final, though the language of detente allows him to phrase it more ambiguously. The majority of our leaders seem to be taken in. Pray God it is not already too late for us, too.

SIGN OF GOOD HEALTH

The Lansing, Michigan, State Journal featured a column, a short time ago, by Mr. Jim Hough that should deflate those who have been happily writing about the decline of a legendary retail store promotion institution -- the trading stamp. Mr. Hough, it seems, inquired of a leading trading stamp company representative whether the popularity of trading stamps has diminshed with housewives and merchants. The reply brings to mind a paraphrase of a classic expression -- the reported death of the trading stamp industry is greatly exaggerated.

According to the representative of this one company, his firm employs 8,000 persons in the United States. It pays more than $50 million a year in federal and state taxes. It has eight warehouses with nearly 40 million cubic feet of storage space to hold 13 million pieces of inventory. The company prints 62 billion stamps a year, about 2.5 times as many as the U.S. Post Office. It redeems an average of 10 million stamp books a month, 450,000 books per 8-hour day, 56,000 books per hour, 940 books per minute, etc. The representative also noted that the gift book published for stamp savers by his company is the largest single publication printed in America -- more than 30 million copies annually.

The operations of this single trading stamp concern hardly indicate the death throes of a dying industry. The fact that promotion and advertising continue to thrive is one of the best auguries of the future in these times of inflation and turmoil. Promotion and advertising are the most important vital signs of a healthy free market. As long as these signs continue to show strength, consumers and the marketplace will somehow manage to survive the dislocations of political and financial mismanagement of the country's affairs.

RE-EVALUATION NOW REQUIRED

Highly-qualified scientific spokesmen in increasing numbers are expressing concern over the slowdown in new drug development in the United States -- a slowdown they attribute to the regulatory policies and practices of the federal government. Delegates at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association adopted a resolution calling for the Association to "Continue to protest" regulatory activities of the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) that have the effect of restricting the use of prescription drugs to conditions and doses listed in approved labeling and package inserts or which "threaten to interfere with the exercise of a physician's professional prerogatives in selecting the drug of choice for a patient."

For more than a decade, the prescription drug industry has lived in a punitive regulatory atmosphere virtually without precedent -- an atmosphere rooted in the consumerist's no-risk philosophy. This philosophy threatens to paralyze progress in everything from nuclear power to medical care. Such an atmosphere is particularly damaging to the U.S. prescription drug industry. Drug companies are research oriented. They represent an industry that spends over one half billion dollars a year seeking breakthroughs in the discovery of new lifesaving drugs. Drug company researchers work on the frontiers of human knowledge, and their efforts are particularly susceptible to the deadening effect of bureaucratic rule making. It now takes many millions of dollars and perhaps a decade to bring a new drug to market. Only the strongest companies can carry through new drug programs.

Inordinate regulatory delays and marketing restrictions are now threatening the lives and health of millions of people for whom drugs may not be available when needed. The action of the country's largest associatioin of physicians buttresses the case for a re-evaluation of regulatory policies governing the prescription drug industry.

People Are Like That

When I was a third grader, the overcrowed two-room school in our factory town transferred me and three classmates to a larger school in an upper class neighborhood. I'll never forget how shy and miserable we felt among these well-to-do, well-dressed children. Even our teacher, we we re sure, resented spending her noon hours with us, the only lunchers in the building.

As outsiders, we made every effort to obey the rules. And because the various grades were having a punctuality contest, we were never late for school. This was difficult, because we had to walk three miles-across a field, a swamp, and up a steep hill-each morning.

One dark winter morning a freezing rain had glazed the hill with ice. We crept to the top on hands and kees, grasping bushes and clumps of weeds on our way. Just as we reached there, we heard the last bell ring. Panic-stricken, we slipped toward school. No one in our class had been tardy. We ruin our room's record and be disgraced!

The bell tolled for the last time as we pulled open the heavy door. I burst into tears. "Don't cry," a kindly voice said. Mr. Doherty, our school janitor, stood smiling with his hands on the bell rope. "Just leave your wraps and lunch buckets here. I'll ring the bell two more times."

We settled in ur seats just as the bell stopped ringing. No one seemed to notice my tears or the extra bells. After that morning, school no longer seemed unfriendly. To u. Mr. Doherty was the most important person i in the school. And he never failed to greet us with a friendly word and the warm of a shared secret.--Aletha Lindstrom.

The powers that control the radio and television industry ban certain types of advertising, such as cigarettes, yet printed media--newspapers, magazines, etc.-are allowed to do so.

We argue neither for the lotteries nor for cigarettes, but it does seem to us if it is legal to tell about lotteries through the mail it should be legal to send the tickets through the mail; and by the same token, if cigarette and other objectionable advertising is to be banned on the air waves, they should also be banned on the reading pages.--Paris Appeal

Boone, N. C., Democrat: "Perhaps the most dangerous thing that has taken place at points of Federal power is the bill which Congress appears set to pass, come hell or high water, namely that of financing Presidential campaigns from the government till, with our tax money. This of corse forces the individual to support the candidate he votes against as well as for the one he ardently supports. In the larger sense however, when the government takes over the ballot box, the day will come when the name on the ballot will be supplied, to make it easy for the voter. Tat will be the end of even a semblance of democracy."

Would Speed Beneficial Legislation

While the Houe and Senate at Washington are attempting to simplify and speed the legislative processes, they could help matters by making it a rule that on any measure, nothing could be added to unless it related directly to it.

Last week, the bill in Congress to provide tax rebates seemed heading toward early passage, and would probably have received the blessings of President Ford. But-attached to it was a measure to end oil depletion allowances, a highly controversial measure that had no relation whatever to the original tax rebate bill.

Each of those should have stood on their own feet, and should have been introduced as eseparate bills.

As it now stands, both may be defeated, or evetoed by the President, who favored the tax rebates, but objected t ending oil depletion allowances for the big companies. Monroe Countians would like to see both pass, but want them separated, so that each acan be debated on its own mertis.

That same rule would help legislation at Jefferson City.--Paris Appeal

Can't See The End Of The Chunnel

From The Chicago Tribune

Once more the bright hopes of idigging a tunnel under the English Channel have been blighted. Just as the work of boring was getting under way, the British House of Commons, voted to call off the project.

The channel tunnel, known to Britons as the chunnel, has been a dream and-or fear ever since Napoleon's time. It was to the expansive emperor that a French engineer first suggested that France and Britian be linked by an underground tube through which spirited horses would pull coaches.

Napoleon was enchanted with the idea, but Britian sensed that a smooth passageway connecting it with a nation of ambitious miliatary geniuses might have its drawbacks. Some of that feeling persisted through the long years and even continues today. In two World Wars, England was glad to have a tunnelless channel separating it from German troops on the continent.

The tunnel idea, nevertheless, kept surfacing, and so many test holes have been dug that the entire south coast of England must be bored stiff.

Soaring prices were the ostensible reason for deep sixing the chunnel-Britain's estimated share had trebled to $857,000,000. But we wonder if Britain's nostalgic memory of centuries of "splendid isolation" might not be still be a factor. England is in the process of debating its membership in the Common Market. It views itself and the countries of Eurpe as members of a squabbling family. It is drawn to them by affection and common interest-but it dearly loves to have its own separate room in which to withdraw from the turmoil. It is hanging onto that room.

Bloody Bicentennial:
Federal Agents Reveal U. S. Terrorists Have 15,000 Followers -- Many Dangerous

WASHINGTON - Recently, at the last available count, the FBI was investigating 52 subversive organizations. No list was offered. For, on any given day, there may be a few more, a few less. But of that group, in what's dubbed "ongoing investigations," there were 21 avowedly terrorists bands.

To the best of the Bureau's confirmed knowledge, they had 15,000 members. Some were hangers -on. Some, romantics. Some psychotic. And some, so violence-oriented they've proudly claimed bombimgs which have killed and maimed hundreds, and destroyed millions of dollars in property including that of the U. S. Statea Department, power substations, banks, military installations and sections of skyscrapers.

Bombings and incendiary attacks are jumping. Property damage by such "devices" has increased 400 per cent in 1975's first two months over the same period last year.

Ever more cops have been killed. Increasing numbers of lawmen have been wounded.

Most of this ghastly damage and bloody evidence of a killer-oriented revolutionary terrorism has been traced to either the 21 bands in the FBI probes, or to some of the underground "cells" of activist leaders.

Were this a movie script, which grimly it isn't, the words used now would be "fade into" terrorism abroad. There can be no detailing on home-front revolutionary violence without reporting the counter-anarchist battle by the police of the Federal Republic of Germany and West Berlin. I can recall talking with the "Police President" of that enclaved city. Nice fellow. He said he had it all beat. Just go in and "dialogue" with the anarchist. He had a special squad of some 70 bright policemen who could handle it all. Yank the revolutionists' fangs with a sort of conversational dentist's tooth puller.

Well, it isn't that simple. Not when you're dealing with fanatical self-pronounced latter day anarchists such as the heavily armed Baader-Meinhof, "Red Army Faction."

Proudly the faction has claimed the execution of a judge, the attempted asassination of the treasurer of Germany's Christian Democratic Party (conservative) and the kidnapping of the party's candidate for mayor of Berlin.

Thus one high German security official reported that "we are protecting several thousand people."

Can it happen here.

American authorities believe it can. Especially during the series of bicentennial celebrations. There's no reference here to the bearded beer drinkers who consumed enough at Concord to drown an escadrille of Paul Revere horses last weekend. The talk is of bombers. Terrorists. Targets. Few know. Those are chosen at the last moment by cell leaders who don't even trust all their own people -- and most "cells" now have about five members.

Some cadres plant their bombs and then phone warnings. Or bomb electric power substations in what's now called Operation Robin Hood: "Free energy and food for the poor."

Some units just bomb. As did the Puerto Rican Armed Forces for National Liberation.

Now the authorities believe the whole red spectrum, from the Weather People to new outfits such as the New World Liberation Front, will concentrate on the bicentennial celebration, on the celebrities who will congregate and speak at the rallies, and on symbols of America, be they capitalism or labor.

So, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has allotted a million dollars to the study of pervention of bicentennial disruption and possible bloodletting.

Especially protected will be corporations with "extensive international interests." It won't be easy or inexpensive. U. S. security forces may have to shield "thousands" as do the Germans. Few security men, either during their series of secret international conferences or during discussion in the Presdient's cabinet committeed on terrorism, forget the slaughter at the Munich Olympics.

How costly . There is a Rand Corporation study disclosing that the annual budget for private security and the number of trained personnel involved now equal or exceed that of public law enforcement in the U. S. Not exactly a minor input in the cost of living.

And the LEAA sponsors such operations as the Redstone Arsenal (Huntsville, Ala.) Hazardous Devices Course and the FBI helps conduct regional conferences on terrorism and prevention of seizure and also the release of hostages.

Whether or not the U. S. goes Germany's way depends on the intelligence gathered by our national security agencies, which seem to discomfit some stargazing wall- to- wall carping critics these days.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Sikes, Modern Southern Hero
By JACK ANDERSON
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D.-Fla., will soon have a new library named for him in his home town of Crestview , Fla.

The moving spirit behind this civic undertaking is Fairchild Industries, which has its own reasons for wishing to immortalize Sikes in brick and mortar. One motive might be that he helped the firm land a $138 million aircraft deal alast year.

Already, there are other reminders around Crestview of Sikes' eminence. The local airport bears hs name. There is also a Robert L. F. Sikes elementary school. And in nearby Niceville, his name has been given to an honorary faculty chair at Okaloosa-Walton junior college.

Lesser Southern heroes, such as Robert E. Lee and Pierre Beauregard, were obliged to wait until they were dead and gone for such honors.

On the scale of values upon which statesmen are usually judged, Sikes might appear to be overrated by his admirers. This does not necessarily mean, however, that he is undeserving of the homage he is receiving.

For bald, bullet-headed Bob Sikes is the biggest thing that has happened to Crestview. Not only has he represented the Florida panhandle in Congress longer than anyone else in recorded history, but he is also the model of a modern major general.

It was not his destiny to storm the barricades like Lee and Beauregard. Rather, he fought the Battle of the Budget year after year on Capitol Hill. No one ever fought more heroically for Army appropriations.

The Army rewarded him, in turn, with promotions in the Army reserves. As Sikes gained seniority on the House Military Appropriations subcommittee, he also advanced through the ranks to major general.

His influence over military expenditures also increased, and defense contractors began to butter him up. He is credited by the town fathers with persuading Fairchild Industries to open an aircraft maintenance facility, employing 400 people, in Crestview, This made Fairchild the town's largest employer.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, Sikes has championed the A-10 airplane, which Fairchild manufacturers. Thanks largely to his prodding, the House Appropriations Committee recommended spending $159.2 million for 30 A-10s. The Senate tried to hold down the spending to $118 million for 20 aircraft. Finnally, a compromise was reached to pay $138 million for 25 of the planes.

Meanwhile, the company through the Fairchild Foundation has offered $25,000 to help build the new library. The president of the Robert L. F. Sikes Library Association is none other than Edward G. Uhl, who also happens to be president of Fairchild. The company's chief press agent, Walter Rossbach, also serves as part-time executive director for the library association. Rossbach told us the firm became involved in the project because "we've got good relations between the city government and our company." All the contributions, he said, are controlled by the city.

Sikes has contributed $5,000 and has offered his personal papers to the library that will exalt his name.

UNREPORTED KIDNAPING: An American narcotics agent, John McKay, was kidnaped and interrogated by Arab terrorists during the bitter street fighting that rocked Beirut last week.

Open warfare erupted between government forces and guerrilla groups. Because of the confusion, an official report of the incident hasn't yet been written, but we have been able to piece together the story.

McKay was driving through the riot-torn streets of Beirut last week when Fedayeen guerrillas stopped his car, hauled him out and hustled him off to a refugee camp. The narcotics agent was "roughed up," according to sources familiar with the incident.

For more than 48 hours, McKay was held by the terrorists who questioned him carefully. The agent, who was assigned to Beirut last August, speaks fluent Arabic.

Back in Washington, McKay's superiors quietly but urgently pressed for his release. They contacted Col. Osman E. Osman, the rspected director of the Lebanese Criminal Investigations unit.

Osman located McKay's abductors and convinced them that the American was a narcotics agent who had been working closely with Lebanese authorities. The guerrillas were assured that McKay was not a "a political type."

During the early morning hours of Saturday, April 19, McKay was quietly released. The next day, his car was returned.

Footnote: The night before the abduction, a car belongng to the Drug Enforcement Administration was blown up in Beirut by a stick of dynamite. No one was injured. DEA boss John Bartels, however, doesn't believe the incidents were aimed at DEA.

Witnesses to visit area homes in May

During the first week in May, Jehovah's Witnesses will visit homes in the Sikeston area distributing a tract titled, "Would You Welcome Some Good News?" according to Donald Kluck, presiding overseer of the local congregation.

Jehovah's Witnesses are widely known for their systematic door-to-door coverage of entire cities and counties in the distribution of tracts.

The key to citywide and countywide coverage by Jehovah's Witnesses is maps, coupled with organization. It has been stated that probably no organization in the world has mapped out everynook and cranny of the globe with such detail as have Jehovah's Witnesses.

At the world headquarters at Brooklyn, N. Y., maps of the entire nation are broken down to small areas which are then assigned to an entire congregataion.

After each congregation receives its individual area to work, such as an entire county or a portion of a metropolitan area, the local congregation in turn breaks down this area into smaller sections. Each section then becomes a "territory", a term used by the Witnesses to designate any one area they are concentrating on at a time.

During a weekend of activity by an entire congregation, several territories may be covered. In addition to scanning a territory once, additonal effort is made to reach those not at home the first time.

Thus, the area to be covered and number of Witnesses in that area are factors determining how often they will call on a home. They endeavor to cover their assigned territory systematically.

During the past year distribution of free tracts has enabled the Witnesses to accomplish more coverage of territory in the least amount of time. These tracts usually convey the same general message, that of hope for mankind's problems by divine government.

Expenses incurred by the Witnesses in distributing literature, as well as conducting free home Bible studies are borne by each individual Witness.

At the semi-annual convention of Jehovah's Witnesses held last weekend at Cape Girardeau, W. C. Booker, 1911 Compress Road, opened the Saturday evening session by citing experiences of how some people have become Jehovah's Witnesses. Among those interviewed was Kluck, 309 Benton St., who firsts became interested in Bible study while serving in the Navy in Puerto Rico.

Len Meyers, the associate pastor at First Assembly of God.

'Gospel Road' to be shown in 3 churches

The story is old, but the perspective is updated and brought into sharp focus by the film, "The Gospel Road", which is scheduled for showings in three more area churches Sunday and Monday nights.

Churches which have announced plans to host screenings of the motion picture Sunday are First Baptist Church in Bloomfield, where it will be shown at 7 p.m., and Temple Baptist, located at 200 Jackson St., Sikeston, where the showing will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Distributed by Worldwide Pictures, the movie -- in beautiful color -- was conceived and produced by Cash after his conversion to Christianity.

No admission will be charged, but donations will be accepted to cover expenses involved in showing the film.

The film features a unique blend of scripture- based narrative, an abundant supply of specially written songs and a series of indepth character portrayals, with Israel intself as the Mixing bowl.

The POWER of FAITH

THE BIBLE

184. Naaman Is Healed

The King of Syria greatly admired Naaman, the military commander who had led troops to many sensational victories. Naaman was a leper. It happened that a small girl taken captive during a raid into Israel predicted that the prophet in Samaria could cure Naaman. So the King of Syria sent Naaman to the King of Israel, along with 10 talents of silver, 6,000 pieces of gold, and 10 suits of clothing.

But the King of Israel was vexed, for he could not cure leprosy. However, Elisha asked him to send Naaman to him. When Naaman came to Elisha's house, the prophet "...sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean." (II Kings 5:10)

At first Naaman was very angry and refused to bathe seven times in the Jordan River. Finally, however, his men persuaded him to follow Elisha's instructions. When he finished bathing, he was healed, and he offered the rich gifts to Elisha, but the prophet refused them.

CALLED TO NEW FULLNESS

Women on the go

CLAUDIA DVORAK, 1015 N. Kingshighway, says she is a "kook." She feels ministers' wives often are forced into stereotyped roles. "We should be able to express our independence and be willing to give t he gifts God gave us."

Her gift has been to be her husband's, who is the Rev. Otto Dvorak, minister of the First United Methodist Church, personal secretary.

Her duties include typing personal letters, composing a newsletter, recording marriages, funerals and baptisms, helping out in the church kitchen and cueing brides when to walk down the aisle.

But perhaps her biggest job is to file personal information on 11,073 members and keep mailing addresses current. To increase accuracy, she created three work orders for enrollment, leaving the church and address information.

In addition, she clips sermon ideas from newspapers and magazines to keep her husband one step ahead and obituaries so her husband may make comforting calls.

Mrs. Dvorak is willing to be a bookkeeper, secretary and problem-solver "to relieve her husband of a lot of details. It helps him to do a more effective job, we feel. I can do things here while he is sitting in an intensive care unit with a dying patient."

A native of Paris, Tex., she was "scared to death" to marry a minister. But for the last 32 years, the Dvoraks have formed an effective husband and wife team. As a minister's wife, she strongly dislikes "sitting in church alone" since her children are grown. The couple has three children, Robert, 30, Mrs. Judy Kennedy, 28, and Mrs. Ruth Rost, 21, plus four grandchildren.

Mrs. Dvorak enjoys attending women church circles to give special programs and to keep abreast of ideas. She once attended seven circle meetings in two days. When the day's schedule is heavy, she sometimes catches up on her work at home. Her hours at the church are long "because I'd have to be sitting at home anyway and he (her husband) is here."

For the past two years, Mrs. Dvorak has been director of Ecumenical Vacation Church School, consisting of six churches and this year is co-director, currently involved in recruiting teachers.

Presently, she is chairman of Mission & Social Concerns at the church, a committee that sets programs involving missionaries and helps the needy. She also orders supplies as a secretary for the United Methodist Women.

The last two years she was secretary for local Church Women United, a past president of District Susannahs (for Methodist ministers' wives) and a past secretary of the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Dvorak's motto is "Be yourself and make the best use of your talents.

"I don't see myself as a model for other ministers' wives. It would be a dull world if we were all alike. I'm just my husband's helper."

Pregnancy diets may cause harm

This column is a service from Cooperative Extension Nutritionists at Lincoln University andthe University of Missouri.

Q. I am overweight and am expecting a baby. Can you suggest a reducing diet I can follow during my pregnancy?

A. From Dr. Mary Bess Kohrs, Nutrition Researcher at Lincoln University: Pregnancy is not an appropriate time to lose weight. Your primary concern now must be for the well-being of yourself and your infant, and proper nutrition is of vital importrance to both.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists released a position paper in 1972, and one of the statements from the paper relates directly to your question: "Weight gain during pregnancy should not be restricted unduly, nor should weight reduction be normally attempted. The average weight gain in normal pregnancy is 22 to 27 pounds."

At one time some physicians considered strict weight control during pregnancy to be desirable, and therefore recommended minimum calorie diets. However, in recent years evidence has been accumulating about the hazards of inadequate nutrition for a mother and her unborn infant. For example, severely restricting food intake of experimental animals during pregnancy has been found to increase complications for the mother and to adversely affect the health of offspring. Both mental and physical development may be impaired in the infants of malnourished female animals, and this impairment sometimes has been found to be permanent so that the infant is handicapped to a greater or lesser degree for all of his life. The effects of nutrition in pregnancy for humans is not an easily researched, but observations on clinical studies suggest that the situation may be similar as that fond for animals.

In order for a person to lose weight it is necessary to restrict intake of calories, which means that protein foods such as meat will also be restricted, since they typically are rich sources of both calories and protein. An adequate intake of calories and protein for a pregnantwoman is essential to help insure optimum health of her developing infant. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists makes the following recommendations in this regard: (1) Caloric intake should be about 10 per cent above the nonpregnant requirement; (2) Adequate amounts of protein, particularly protein from animal sources (to insure high quality) should be consumed. Another general rule that may be helpful is that every pregnant woman should consume a minimum of 1500-1800 calories each day.

Stepping high

Running in place, members of the high school girls' track team keep those legs limber for today's track meet at Jackson. The team already has won its first two meets since it was newly formed this year. From left are Jeannie Vines, Kay Phillips, Sandy Spurlin, Teena McCain and Mrs. Jane Merrick, track coach.

SHS track girls work hard to win

By SANDY HEI and JAN TEAGUE

Girls' sports at Sikeston High School have blossomed this year in the form of golf, tennis, volleyball and track. However, this is the first year girls from the SHS campus have participated in track events. Approximately 30 girls compose the team, so far, they have won two meets with Charleston and Dexter.

Any day of the week, a person passing by the track can observe girls in all kinds of apparel, ranging from sweatsuits to shorts going through every exercise imaginable. After warm-ups, the girls each run a mile, then split into groups to practice their chosen events.

Mrs. Jane Merrick, sponsor and coach of the track team, started the team to allow the girls to comperte in inter-school meets as the boys do. "I feel the girls need to have a challenge and it is good for them to stay in shape this way. Femininity and sports can go hand in hand and I don't think any of the girls' goal is to prove that they are as good or better than the boys."

Mrs. Merrick added that she thought the boys were better in track and had more endurance than the girls. When asked what motivated girls to join this group, she said, "The weight loss, firming of muscles and a sense of competition and winning is a large part, as well as the earning of a letter for their sweaters."

Davene Schaffer, 423 Shady Lane, a trackster who runs the 440-yard dash, claims that girls at SHS have been neglected in the way of sports until the last few years. She enjoys "running, feeling that I represent Sikeston and all the students and doing my best." Davene says that she and the other girls are not out to be as fast as the boys. "They have had more experience and are more conditioned to running."

Nearly fifty girls started track but the number soon dwindled when they saw the work and time required to be a fast-running winner. Davene observed that the remaining girls are working hard and are serious about the work and meets remaining to be run.

"Some of the girls' parents thought the work would be too hard and asked their daughters to quit. Some of the girls quit because they didn't have time for all the practices. When practice started, all the girls were very enthusiastic about it but once the real work started, they changed their minds!"

Davene says that when she wins, she wins for the whole team and everything is done for the entire group, as the winners of each event contribute to the team's final score. First, second and third place have points attached to them and these points are tallied to obtain the winning school's score. "Every runner is important, even if they don't get a first. All of us work for that team total." Davene came in first at the Charleston meet and was only two-tenths of a second away from first at Dexter.

It is plain to see girls at SHS are serious about their track and are out to win — proving that if they are not as fast as the boys, they sure do work as much, if not put out more effort to be winners.

Ann Landers

Sister learns picture lesson from mom's death

Dear Ann Landers: I've learned a lot from your column. Now it's my turn to teach somebody something. It's a lesson that comes out of my own experience.

My sister and brother and I are in our 40s. Mama passed away last week. We agreed to get together last night at Mama's house, go through her possessions and divide everything.

We came across a large box of wonderful photographs and snapshots. Some go back 75 years. Mama undoubtedly got many of these pictures from her mother and grandmother. The people are so attractive and wonderful-looking, but we have no idea who they are. What a shame that someone didn't take the time and trouble to jot down on the back of each picture the names and a few notes about the people. Even the city would be a clue. What a pity! All those beautiful ancestors and no one will ever know their names, where they came from or anything about them.

Please print this letter and tell your readers it would take only an hour or so to go through the family's old pictures and identify the people. What a favor you will be doing for those who one day will want to know. -- Mystified

Dear Misty: Thank you for the excellent suggestion. I think I'll do it tonight!

Dear Ann Landers: Am I crazy? If so, please tell me. True, I was reared in a weird home. We ate our meals together and talked to each other at the table. There was no "cocktail hour."

When I married I had the nutty idea that my marriage would be like my parents'. But I was wrong. My husband's family cocktailed it up every night and he insists on doing the same, even though I don't drink. If the kids are kept waiting an hour, so what? Daddy has to "unwind" with three or four martinis.

When I look around I must admit my husband doesn't drink any more than his brothers and sisters, or most of our friends. Whenever we go to a party, people guzzle the booze as if they're in a contest to see who can pass out first, vomit the most, or feel lousiest the next day.

Is getting bombed really fun? Should I teach my children that they don't need to cope with problems, just get stinko and forget about them? Is a person who doesn't drink considered freaky? Is there ANY occasion where an adult can order tomato juice these days and not be ridiculed or pestered to "have a REAL DRINK"? I repeat my first question: Am I crazy? -- Odd Ball

Dear Ball: No, you aren't crazy. And chances are a lot of those boozers aren't crazy either. They're just insecure, troubled people who can't face their own inadequacies and anxieties, so they try to anesthetize themselves against the painof living.

Unfortunately, the more they drink the less able they are to cope. Sadder still, they really do hate themselves becaue they wish they could order a tomato juice and feel as well and look as good as you.

Hang in there, honey, and don't despair.

SIGNS FOR '76 LEMA

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Touring PGA golfer Gary Sanders missed holing long putts by inches 10 times during the ninth Tony Lema Memorial at Marco Island. Despite his first appearance over the course he shot a 75 and has signed to play in the 1976 event.

Sanders, a 25-year-old native of Lynwood, Calif., earned nearly $23,000 on the 1974 PGA tour, his second since graduating from the University of Southern California. Long and straight off the tee, Sanders says he plans to remain on tour and has no ideas of ever becoming a club pro.

The case of the loaded sister-in-law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

The Webbs were a large family and, it seemed, all of its members were living in the same house under the same roof. There were so many Webbs around, in fact, that a distant relative was never more than two feet away.

Nevertheless, the only real commotion ever caused in the house occurred when Dr. Webb operated on his sister-in-law Nellie and then handed her a bill for services rendered.

"You've got to be kidding," fumed Nellie. "For all the years we've been living together in the same house, you've got some nerve trying to charge me. I never charged you for anything. And, over the years, I must have fried you 10,000 eggs for breakfast, to say nothing of a pig pen full of bacon."

"It's not the same thing," responded Dr. Webb in his defense. "When a physician performs an operation, he's entitled to be paid. Particularly when the patient has more money than he has. And, sister-in-law, you're loaded and I need the money."

The family dispute finally ended in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make loaded Nellie pay for her operation?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that, generally, where near relatives reside together as a family, services rendered by one member to another are presumed to be gratuitous. In this case, concluded the judge, there was no evidence to rebut that presumption. That with no prior agreement to the contrary, it was presumed that Nellie's operation would be performed free of charge.

Fire destroys house

BENTON — Fire destroyed a house, located on the Frank Moore farm four and a half miles east of town, about 1:30 a.m. today, according to Harold Beaird, a fire marshal for the Morley fire department.

Morley firemen responded to the call, but by the time they arrived, the house was in ashes, Beaird said. There were no injuries and no other buildings were damaged.

No estimate was given on the amount of the damage, and the firemen were unable to determine how the fire started.

"It was raining hard and the wind was stong," Beaird said. "We were standing under a tin-roofed shed and could hardly hear anybody talk."

Benton firemen also responded to the call, but took no equipment was taken because Benton Fire Chief Tom Frobase said the fire was too far away to use the city's firefighting equipment.

Commission will study county

BENTON — A planning and zoning commission for Scott County could be appointed by the County Court some time in May, Presiding Judge Louie Hirschowitz said Thursday in discussing a plan to zone the unincorporated areas of the county.

The commission will have eight members -- one from each township -- who must live in an unincorporated part of the county. The commission will make a study of the county and develop a zoning plan. The court will have final approval of any plan.

Hirschowitz said advice will be sought from all sources, including the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission at Malden and the University of Missouri. The court has discussed he possibility of a comprehensive plan being drawn up for the county by the Malden based planning commission, and has invited Henry Galetschky of the University of Missouri to act as an advisor.

Galetschky Monday night gave a prepared talk to about 25 people on the procedure of zoning a county. He announced that the university has appropriated $13,000 for a film to be produced in Scott County on planning and zoning.

The film in its final version will be about 20 minutes long, and will show highlights of the program as it develops.

Hirschowitz said the plan will be drawn up before any decisions on how to zone the county, and that the plan will be as simple as possible.

He also mentioned Thursday that Dr. John Sargent ofSikeston has been appointed as the doctor to the nine-member board of directors of the countywide sheltered workship and Fred Glover of Sikeston has been appointed as the law enforcement officer.

State law requires that a law officer and doctor be appointed to the board. Appointed to the board last week were Alberk Marks and Bill Corrigan of Sikeston, Charlie Heuring of Chaffee Route One, George Pendergrass of Scott City, Tom Arnold of Benton, Lila Brannack of Sikeston and June Stubbs of Chaffee.

Chowders are attractive to serve as the main course for Sunday-night supper. To make a quick version, you can use canned condensed cream of potato soup, canned whole-kernel corn and leftover flaked fish. This hearty soup will benefit from freshly ground pepper, so when you serve it pass the pepper mill.

Spirits back home

ST. LOUIS (AP) —"We've got to cut down on our turnovers and we've got to execute our offense better," St. Louis Spirits Coach Bob MacKinnon says.

And if the two objectives can be accomplished, MacKinnon believes, his young team can flag down the high-flying Kentucky Colonels in American Basketball Association playoffs tonight.

The Colonels, capitalizing on a 43-19 bulge in foul shots, eased past the Spirits 108-103 for a 2-0 lead in their best-ofseven semifinal series Wednesday night.

"But I think every game is important," MacKinnon maintained. "If we'd won the first two we'd still be looking forward to this one."

Aside from cutting down on Kentucky's foul shooting, MacKinnon said he also hopes for better scoring distribution among his starting five players.

In reference to Gus Gerard's four-point total in the two previous games, the St. Louis coach noted that "our shooting at the one forward position has got to improve.

"We're doing primarily what we set out to do," MacKinnon observed of the St. Louis defense, "but we've just got to execute our own fast break better."

In the absence of foul-shackled Maurice Lqcas, the Spirits' Marvin Barnes was able to restrict the Colonels' towering Artis Gilmore to 23 points during the loss Wednesday night.

But, with the aggressive Lucas not around to clog the lane, Kentucky guard Ted McClain often went unharassed and scored 24 points to lead his team.

"The last month of the season he really came alive," MacKinnon said of the 6-foot-3 McClain, who averaged only 8.6 points during the regular season.

"McClain is a very strong player," he added. "I think he's capable of scoring if we don't watch him. He can bust out anytime."

In the aftermath of the Wednesday night game the Spirits on Thursday filed a protest with the ABA office concerning the refereeing of Norm Drucker and Ed Rush.

"We don't expect it go to anywhere, but at least it'll go on record as our protest against the officiating," Spirits publicity director Mike Recht said.

Missouri University winds up its spring drills Saturday with the annual Black and Gold battle.

Mizzou faces a devatating schedule this fall --- opening against Alabama at Birmingham, and playing Michigan at Ann Arbor in the fourth game --and overall, the Tigers will be meeting four of the teams that finished in the Associated Press top ten (1. Oklahoma; (3) Michigan; (5) Alabama and (9) Nebraska.)

Missouri returns 38 lettermen from a 7-4 team that tied Nebraska for second place in the Big Eight last year. Five starters are back on offense and four on defense.

However, Coach Al Onofrio sees the nucleus for a strong attack in the power-running of Tony Galbreath, the passing of quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz, and the speed of sophomore Joe Stewart at slotback.

The Tigers' biggest offensive deficiency seems to be the need to uncover a good wide receiver and tight end. Gone is Mark Miller, MU's split end who led the Big Eight in receptions last year.

On defense, Ol' Mizzou must replace the hard-core of its unit -- both starting tackles and starting linebackers ... returning standouts should be Kenny Downing, cornerback, and co-captain Bob McRobers, end ... both are two year regulars.

Galbreath could be one of the Big Eight's premier running backs, and Pisarkiewica is considered to own the best passing arm seen on the Mizzou campus since the days of Paul Christman (1938-40).

The Tigers will be checking out four new junior college transfers in spring practice --- running back Curt Brown; Linebacker Tim Helm; defensive tackle Curtis Kirkland, and tightend Percy McBride.

Five Southeast Missouri prep stars are listed on the Tigers spring roster. Heading the group is Annise Davis, former East Prairie gridiron star and now a resident of Malden. Davis started the final three games for the Tigers last season and is expected to provide Mizou with a tough fullback if he recovers from an early spring injury. Others from the bootheel on the Missouri roster are Ward Billings of Kennett; Mike Litzenfelner of Jacksson and Cape Girardeau standouts --- Bill Seabaugh and Paul Schermann.

STARS

Lilbourn's Pat McClarty and Sikeston's Bob Blankenship are keeping the Missouri Southern baseball team on the winning track this spring.

McClarty is leading the team in hitting with a .459 average in 27 games. The left handed slugging infielder leads the team in hitting with 34 and doubles with 11 while ranking second in runs battled in with 19.

Blankenship is undefeated in three games this season, working 27 and two thirds inning while fashioning a 3.58 earned run average.

Don Mead of Holister, Mo., caught 10 black bass weighing a total of 30 pounds 6½ ounces to take the lead Wednesday after the first round of the Missouri Invitational Bass Tournament at Kimberling City.

Otto Rubenhausen of Leavenworth, Kan., is second with 25 pounds 14 ounces and Randy Joubert of Moragn City, La., is third with 22 pounds 8 ounces. Fourth in J. K. Rhyan of El Dorado, Ark.

The tournament which offers about $20,000 in prizes, continues through Friday.

Puckett heads golf Assoc.

Bill Puckett has been named president of the Sikeston Men's Golf Association after the league meeting early this week. Fred Koch was named vice-president and Hugh McCollum, secretary-treasurer.

Seven tournaments were scheduled for this summer and fall, beginning May 15 with a scramble. Tee off will be 5:15 p.m. for all scrambles, which are scheduled aJun 5, June 26, July 17 and Aug . 7. A handicap tournament will be held Aug. 23-24 and a season ending scramble and banquet will be held Sept. 4, at which time awards and prizes will be awarded and election of officers for 1976 will be made.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League have signed three of their 1975 draft picks, and two of the prospects played their schoolboy ball outside Philadelphia in Bucks County, Pa.

The Eagles announced on Thursday the signing of defensive back Ken Schroy, a 10th-round pick from Maryland and Quakertown High School in Quakertown, Pa.

Also signed, according to the Eagles, were 14th-round choice Larry O'Rourke, a defensive tackle from Ohio State and Pennsbury High School in Bucks County.

You're never too old to hear better.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. - A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A replica of the smallest Beltone aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Try it to see how it is worn in the privacy of your own home without cost or obligation of any kind. It's yours to keep, free. It weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit. No wires lead from body to head.

These models are free, so we suggest you write, for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation.

CALL 334-4200 for information or write Beltone Hearing Aid Center, 1901 Broadway, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.
